ABSTRACT
Municipal solid waste management is a major environmental issue in India. Due to rapid economic development, urbanization and improved living standards, the generation of municipal solid waste in Indian cities and towns is also increased. Management of municipal solid waste can cause adverse environmental impacts, public health risk and other socio-economic problems. This paper highlights the present scenario of municipal solid waste management in India which can help the competent authorities responsible for municipal solid waste management to take appropriate measures in this regard. The paper also highlights the various categories of wastes well recognized as they are very common in our daily life such as domestic, commercial, industrial (due to construction and demolition), agricultural, institutional and manufacturing. Many times domestic wastes are considered as non-hazardous and are considered together as urban wastes (Tyagi, 2005). Municipal solid waste management is a combination of household and commercial refuse which is generated from the living community (Johansen et al., 2010). The continuous indefinite disposal of municipal solid waste is accelerating and is linked to poverty, poor governance, abhorrent population growth, poor standards of living, low level of education and public health diseases (Tyagi, 2005).
